Oxidative Stress and Vascular Disease John F. Keaney Jr., 1999-12-31 One of the major biomedical triumphs of the post World War II era was the definitive demonstration that hypercholesterolemia is a key causative factor in atherosclerosis that hypercholesterolemia can be effectively treated and that treatment significantly reduces not only coronary disease mortality but also all cause mortality Treatment to lower plasma levels of cholesterol primarily low density lipoprotein LDL cholesterol is now accepted as best medical practice and both physicians and patients are being educated to take aggressive measures to lower LDL We can confidently look forward to important decreases in the toll of coronary artery disease over the coming decades However there is still uncertainty as to the exact mechanisms by which elevated plasma cholesterol and LDL levels initiate and favor the progression of lesions There is general consensus that one of the earliest responses to hypercholesterolemia is the adhesion of monocytes to aortic endothelial cells followed by their penetration into the subendothelial space where they differentiate into macrophages These cells and also medial smooth muscle cells that have migrated into the subendothelial space then become loaded with multiple large droplets of cholesterol esters the hallmark of the earliest visible atherosclerotic lesion the so called fatty streak This lesion is the precursor of the more advanced lesions both in animal models and in humans Thus the centrality of hypercholesterolemia cannot be overstated Still the atherogenic process is complex and evolves over a long period of time

Seed Proteins Peter R. Shewry, R. Casey, 2012-12-06 Seeds provide more than half of the world's intake of dietary protein and energy and thus are of immense economic, cultural, and nutritional importance. Proteins can account for up to 40% of the dry weight of various types of seeds, thereby making a large contribution to the nutritional quality and processing properties of seeds. It is therefore not surprising that seed proteins were among the first plant components to be systematically studied some 250 years ago and have been a major focus of research over the past 100 years. The properties and behaviour of seed proteins pervade modern life in numerous ways. For example, legume and cereal proteins are used in the production of a wide range of meat-free foods; the process of bread-making is dependent on the physical-chemical properties of wheat seed proteins and is developed as well as developing countries. Nutritional deficiencies among vegetarian diets are avoided through balancing legume and cereal seeds as sources of dietary proteins. Understanding seed proteins in order to improve their composition and properties and to increase their concentrations will thus continue to be an important research objective for the future. The present volume represents the culmination of a long-discussed plan of the editors to bring together the best international authorities in order to compile a definitive monograph on biological, biochemical, molecular, and genetic aspects of seed proteins.

Genetic Data Analysis for Plant and Animal Breeding Fikret Isik, James Holland, Christian Maltecca, 2017-09-09 This book fills the gap between textbooks of quantitative genetic theory and software manuals that provide details on analytical methods but little context or perspective on which methods may be most appropriate for a particular application. Accordingly, this book is composed of two sections. The first section, Chapters 1 to 8, covers topics of classical phenotypic data analysis for prediction of breeding values in animal and plant breeding programs. In the second section, Chapters 9 to 13, we provide the concept and overall review of available tools for using DNA markers for predictions of genetic merits in breeding populations. With advances in DNA sequencing technologies, genomic data, especially single nucleotide polymorphism (SNP) markers, have become available for animal and plant breeding programs in recent years. Analysis of DNA markers for prediction of genetic merit is a relatively new and active research area. The algorithms and software to implement these algorithms are changing rapidly. This section represents state-of-the-art knowledge on the tools and technologies available for genetic analysis of plants and animals. However, readers should be aware that the methods or statistical packages covered here may not be available or they might be out of date in a few years. Ultimately, the book is intended for professional breeders interested in utilizing these tools and approaches in their breeding programs. Lastly, we anticipate the usage of this volume for advanced-level graduate courses in agricultural and breeding courses.
